Peer Support Issue

What we have been finding out

Hello and welcome to the 2nd issue of the DeStress project newsletter.

The DeStress project is a research study looking to understand how and why stress related issues are being increasingly medicalised through listening to your experiences and views of stress and anxiety issues and the support you have sought.

The project has now been running since November 2016 and so far there have been 16 focus groups with 97 people in total taking part and 45 interviews one to one interviews

There is a new project website if you want to find out more on how your views and opinions from the interviews are shaping the project and what the main findings are so far.

A clear messages we are hearing is your experiences of the varying approaches from the GP's ranging from great support to not so good support.

One of the positive results of what you been telling us is that we are currently working with Health Education England to producing some training for GP's around guidance for approaching mental health and stress issues in a consultation. Together with Health Education England and community partners from our advisory group, we will be shaping this guidance for GP's and Health Professional based on the findings from your interviews

We have been listening to a lot of your experiences of the help and support for stress and anxiety issues and on page 2 we have covered some of the big themes that you feel contribute to the causes and challenges of stress.

And we are also hearing about how peer support groups have been helping some of you to feel better and giving you a greater understanding of your own issues, so we have dedicated this issue to looking at some of the peer support within your communities

Want to take part?

We are nearing the end of the interview stage but would still love to talk with you, so if you are aged between 18-65 and have seen a health professional (like a GP) about stress, anxiety or feeling low because of the kind of issues mentioned. We are interested in what prompted you to seek help, what support you were hoping for and how you felt about the GP visit and the support given.

Interviews can be at a time and place to suit you.

What you've been telling us

These are some of the big challenges you are telling us about

FEELING STIGMATISED & JUDGED

Mental health issues are still seen as having a stigma and people feeling judged and so often prevents people accessing support that is available.

- *The perception of feeling judged comes from attitudes of professional services, like job centres & schools but also from other people within local communities
- *The media is feeding the negative portrayal around health and welfare benefits
- *Fear of being judged as a bad parent
- *Pressures of social media to be seen to have a perfect life

LABELLING & DIAGNOSIS

*You are finding that it can be too quick or easy to have a mental health label, but those labels seem to be necessary to help you get access treatment, support, benefits, housing.

BENEFITS & DISABILITY ASSESSMENTS

- *The process is degrading and in itself causes much stress, anxiety
- *There's still a lack of understanding and recognition of mental health issues

HEALTH SERVICES

- * People find it difficult to see a GP, and seldom the same one.
- *Visiting a GP is often the last resort for support
- *GP's have limited treatment options either pills or talking therapies.

- *Barriers to accessing the talking therapies: like waiting lists, lack of child care provision, costs of travel its short term often not addressing the problem and self- referring, which often people feel is difficult.
- *There are mixed experiences of using medication – it's a way of coping but not addressing the problem, or can feel 'fobbed off'
- *Pressure to comply with available options even if not right for you so that you are seen as helping yourself and to get access to further treatment)
- *Self management as the only alternative to not complying

Peer Support- what is it?

Excerpts from MIND www.mind.org.uk

Peer support is when people use their own experiences to help each other. Support takes on many forms, community groups, befriending, self help groups, support groups and on line communities and different things work for different people.

The support is based on sharing experiences and mutual respect and reciprocal support and may help you to talk about your situation, introduce you to new ideas and ways of coping, reassure you that you are not the only person dealing with this and help you to see just how common mental health issues are, it gives you with a sense of belonging with a community who share your experiences and a safety net in difficult times and will help you if the support you have had so far has left you feeling disillusioned.

There is strong evidence from the DeStress study that involvement in informal community groups and activities is beneficial, with participants saying peer group support has been effective in enhancing their health and wellbeing. We have come across many support groups in the study sites and read more about two groups that are being embraced by local people and helping them feel better and more supported

Teignmouth's Pow Wow cafe & the Crafters of Round Table

The Pow Wow café is a community café in the heart of Kingsway, West Teignmouth it was opened by Mars Hill church in response to the community wanting a local shop and hub. The cafe is community focused and local people are encouraged to bring their activities and groups to use the space.

One group who uses the space is the Crafters of the Round Table, started by Dawn and Kirstine, it's all about learning and sharing crafts, materials their skills. But crafting is just a ruse, whilst it gives the group a focus, this group has developed into an anxiety and stress peer support group and there is no stigma here – it's warm and welcoming, people are open, they share feelings and situations and they support and encourage each other. The best thing is the energy of this group, you can feel the positive glow from them all.

Jaz has been coming to the group for a while, she was encouraged to share her crafting skills and teach others as well as giving her a reason to get out of the house and make her feel better. Ebby was also at home all the time bringing up her young son and had no friends, now she has lots and she has learnt great crafting skills. Both of them also now volunteer in the café and are very much part of this community. They love coming to the café – they have found supportive friends and have weaved themselves into the fabric of this crafting community.

When Jaz was offered to volunteer behind the café counter she 'gave it a go'. She has a long term illness and she loves how Pow Wow is accepting of every individual and invites them in, no matter what disability. "I have gained confidence and that is so important to me, volunteering and the group has made me feel I can do things. I love volunteering in the cafe and it is not pressured like work – if I am ill and can't do it – they are happy to take the rough with the smooth" I recently got the opportunity, through being in Pow wow, to take up a Barista course, so now I can make a decent cup of coffee"- it's a win for everyone

Creative Minds Art Group Plymouth

So what's special about Tuesday's at Mount Wise Neighbourhood Centre? its home to the Creative Minds Art Group, a peer support group run by local people providing a friendly, informal space for anyone in the Plymouth area to come along to, especially those who may have mental health conditions

Started a few years ago by Wolfie, Theresa and Annie, this is a supportive, non judgemental space using arts and crafts as the focus. We share, listen, support each other, connecting through our common interests and shared experiences of mental health. Everyone agrees that the focus of art and making things helps clear the mind – we make and the chat flows.... but no skills are needed to join in and every form of art or craft is available from, painting, model making jewellery to even writing stories. We have all benefitted from coming along, it stops our social isolation, it gives us something to look forward to and a place where we can be ourselves – no need to wear a mask or hide. Whether it's making something or just sitting drinking a coffee, it's important to let people just 'be' and groups like this are even more important now that mental health drop in services have all but vanished'.

We want to invite others along to join this group and help them to be less isolated when facing mental health conditions- there is no judging here, and definitely no treating mental health with the stigma that many feel is associated with it.

'We are not medical professionals but we all have our own experiences to draw on which makes us experts in understanding just how important this support is – having someone who understands and has been there, understanding from a place of shared experience, that has truly helped us all'.

The group is family orientated with junior members who come along in the school breaks, we have large, secure outside space that children can safely run around in, we are also planning many events for the future including day trips to art exhibitions, Eden Project and even London,

'Sometimes I come in feeling like I have the world on my shoulders but leave feeling so much better' – this is something we all need in our lives
